

Richard Krumholz appointed to lead Norton Rose Fulbright's disputes practice group

Richard Krumholz has been appointed as Norton Rose Fulbright's new global head of litigation and disputes, replacing Gerry Pecht, who has been elected to global chief executive.

Krumholz has led the US litigation and disputes practice group since 2014, and will now share leadership duties of the US litigation and disputes practice group with Steve Jansma. Krumholz and Jansma have both spent nearly 30 years at Norton Rose Fulbright having joined the law firm in 1992.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>