Twitter conducts test on harmfully misleading tweets by politicians

TNW reports that Twitter has tested a new feature that labels and corrects tweets by politicians that are deemed harmfully misleading.

The feature labels misleading tweets with bright orange warnings and places tweets from verified fact-checkers and journalists underneath it. Twitter could also include corrections from other users participating in a new crowdsourced "community reports" feature.

The company says the demo is one of several that may roll out in the weeks to come.

Read more on this here.

For more, visit: https://www.bizcommunity.com