

#BeautifulNews: A stray dog showed me purpose

Vanessa Martin's heart shattered when she saw the stray dog outside her office. The creature was emaciated and alone. Martin couldn't just stand by and began feeding her. But this puppy wasn't the only one in need. The streets were filled with homeless dogs and cats. Martin started picking up strays on her way to work, hiding them in the toilet cubicles until she could take them home. But that wasn't enough. After 21 years of working as an administrative clerk, Martin had a renewed sense of purpose. So she quit. "Now I'm doing what I was created to do: rescuing animals," she says.

Read Vanessa Martin's full story here.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>