

Cape Town's taxi strike brings business to a standstill

By  Katja Hamilton

24 Mar 2022

Multiple safety risks have arisen from the planned taxi protest which was approved for today by the City of Cape Town.

Source: iStock

There have been reports of buses set alight in Nyanga as well as of taxis blocking the N2 road way in the vicinity of Khayelitsha and Kraaifontein.

Emergency services and policing agencies are on the scene.

JP Smith, MAYCO member for Safety and Security says the City of Cape Town is aware of the disruption.

The City's enforcement agencies together with the South African Police Service (SAPS), have activated their response plan to protect commuters using public-transport means.

Members of The Cape Amalgamated Taxi Association (Cata) and The Cape Organisation for the Democratic Taxi Association (Codeta) are marching from Hanover Street to the Provincial Legislature in Wale Street. They are presenting a memorandum with a set of grievances - relevant to drivers operating in townships - to Premier Alan Winde.

The grievances include the unfair requirements for releasing impounded vehicles alongside other issues.

Approximately 2,000 operators are participating in the march.

ABOUT KATJA HAMILTON

Katja is the Finance, Property and Healthcare Editor at Bizcommunity.

- Dubai bounces back: Arabian Travel Market spotlights surging visitor numbers - 8 May 2024
- SA Post Office: Union deal halts layoffs at the 11th hour - 24 Apr 2024
- Transition to ZiG currency sparks trade disruption in Zimbabwe - 11 Apr 2024
- Ntshabeleng Likotsi champions the first majority Black women-owned mutual bank - 18 Mar 2024
- African Bank: Championing youth-led small-business solutions at GEC+ Africa - 14 Mar 2024

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>