

Fashion designer, Roberto Cavalli dies aged 83

Italian designer Roberto Cavalli, renowned for his use of animal print and distressed denim, died in Florence, Italy, on 12 April 2024.

Source: <https://www.reuters.com/>

The fashion house that bears his name announced the death on Instagram but provided no details.

"The Roberto Cavalli company shares condolences with Mr. Cavalli's family. His legacy remains a constant source of inspiration," said Roberto Cavalli's CEO Sergio Azzolari.

Cavalli was born on 15 November 1940 in Florence, known for its leatherwork.

After launching his namesake fashion brand in 1970, he later invented and patented an innovative leather printing process.

Cavalli opened his first small shop, Limbo, in the French city of Saint-Tropez in 1972.

As well as animal prints, he was also known for his hippie dresses, sand-blasted jeans, and patchwork designs on denim.

Described as an 'icon' by Victoria Beckham and countless others, Cavalli dressed the likes of Kim Kardashian, Taylor Swift and Zendaya, and rose from humble beginnings to become one of the pre-eminent designers of his era.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>